In the landscape design industry, we design professionals have a choice with how we document our ideas for enhancing and improving a site. This choice typically is split two ways...drawn by hand or drawn by CAD (Computer Aided Design). In this presentation, Eric Gilbey, RLA, APLD Associate Member will present the benefits of choosing CAD as a manner of conveying your ideas into a drawing, and how this process can make your over all design workflow, from start to finish, more efficient and accurate.

Eric Gilbey, RLA, APLD Associate Member is a Landscape Architecture Industry Specialist for Nemetschek North America, where he utilizes his professional experience and CAD skills to assist in the development, marketing and sales of Vectorworks Landmark. Eric received an AAS degree in Landscape Contracting and Construction and a BS degree in Landscape Architecture from the Ohio State University. He is currently serving as the executive board secretary with the DC.MD.VA APLD Chapter. Eric's unique experience as a practicing landscape architect and user of various CAD programs allows him to help landscape architects and designers develop "best practices" including sustainable design.
